DARREN CAI

PUBLICATIONS EXECUTIVE

I became Publications executive in 3rd year.

Ever since I read the Paperpoint back in 2014 as a fresher, I've wanted to write for and eventually become part of AUDSS Publications.

A wide-eyed 18-year-old me was inspired by the blatant humour and hilarious references that provided a glimpse into the difficult but overwhelmingly rewarding life as a dental student. My plan was to contribute an article or two and then try out for the one general committee spot. Eventually I'd try to run for Publications executive in 5th year, even 4th year if I was lucky.

I became Publications executive in 3rd year.

Not because I started off small and won the trust of the committee. Not because I worked hard. Not because I threw competing committee members under the bus for political gain. Nooooo my dear reader.

Because, as fate would have it, the spot was vacant.

They say nothing happens by coincidence and when things like that happen, it's difficult to believe.

There is so much to be shared. Countless stories about my unorthodox experience as an AUDSS executive I could regale you with.

What can I say but – god damn I love this job. Love? Yes... that's the feeling.

I'm sure it is...

I will say though, with complete sincerity, that I'm quite fond of my precious Publications committee and the work that we do. My team may be small but they remain a colossus in my AUDSS life.

So please, friendly reader, enjoy this edition of the Paperpoint.

Who knows... maybe one day you will see your own articles in this magazine.

PUBLICATIONS COMMITTEE

... and to be honest, I am beginning to suspect that Darren and Din are virtual ghosts that I have been communicating with.

A big welcome to everybody!

To the first years, get ready to kick-start your very own dental journey; to the upper years, welcome back to the never-ending odyssey; to final years, I hope you see the light at the end of one of the many tunnels of your career.

2017 has been quite spectacular. The wall maybe laid after all, Roger Federer rose the cup the fifth time here and locally, we are making a big historical move to the new Adelaide Dental Hospital. Without doubt there will be mountain loads of doubts and questions and anxiety about anything and everything, the assurance is there will be help and support throughout this time.

The Publications would also love to hear from you, and we welcome all forms of hands, eyes, nose, feet, etc. to make Paperpoint all the more relevant to you. When you see us around, a "Hi!", a wave or even a smile would be greatly appreciated amidst our chaotic existence here, and to be honest, I am beginning to suspect that Darren and Din are virtual ghosts that I have been communicating with.

PRESIDENT'S & VICE PRESIDENT'S

WELCOME

Welcome to the new year and the first edition of Paperpoint for 2017!

To all the new students, welcome to Adelaide and the AUDSS!

Since 1919, AUDSS has been a core pillar in the community and an organisation beaming with opportunity.

We represent and protect the interests of students studying Bachelor of Dental Surgery (BDS) and Bachelor of Oral Health (BOH) at the University of Adelaide. With almost a century of history, AUDSS prides itself on supporting students. We understand the importance of investment, and we are always mindful of actively developing not only current initiatives but also those in the long-term.

With the move to the new dental hospital, 2017 marks a year of great change and we look forward to creating a new era for the AUDSS.

The AUDSS Committee has been working tirelessly over the past few months and are very excited to be hosting a huge variety of social and academic events as well as providing opportunities to get involved in the wider community.

Keep your eye out for updates through the Adelaide University Dental Students' Society Facebook page:

<https://www.facebook.com/groups/AUDSS/> and AUDSS website www.audss.org.au.

We encourage all to get involved and make the most of every opportunity.

For incoming first years into the course, have a look at our website for a specialised guide:

<http://www.audss.org.au/freshers>. We look forward to meeting you all. Here's to an enjoyable year and all the best as you begin your journey through Dentistry and Oral Health!

MEET THE EXECUTIVES

THE COMMITTEE OF 2017

SARAH LONSDALE

Secretary

HELLO FRESHERS! Sarah the Secretary here. I do the organising behind the AUDSS. So essentially my role is to help you have the best first year of dentistry possible. That means more than just teeth. To give you a taste, this is how first year should pan out...

- Buy a $20 ticket to Skullduggery. This is a med event which means BIG. Get a taste of what's available for the next five years...
- Learn how to wash your hands. Welcome to first year.
- Buddy meet and greet because we all love small talk.
- Freshers BBQ. LOTS of topless boys...and girls.
- CAMP. Great opportunity to make a mistake (or a few) that you have to live with for the next five years.
- Exams. Get cosy with the years above you. ;)

- Fresher's pubcrawl. Every year a fresher passes out in the bathroom. Don't ruin the tradition.
- Buddy re-meet and greet... Who was my buddy?
- Sport days (soccer, netball, volleyball): sport and alcohol is FUN.
- Ball. Waste all your money on a dress you'll only wear once, and a face of expensive make-up that will get ruined when you hook up with that boy you've been eyeing up since camp.
- Exams (again). If you think first year is hard wait until second year.

I hope you all have a fantastic year, please be sure to say hi if you see me around!

SLONSDALE XOXOXO

GEORGE CHEN

Treasurer

Nice to meet you all! My name's George and I'm the Treasurer for the AUDSS this year, as well as a 5th year student.

I ensure that our society will always have dollars in the bank to spend on all the academic and social events that you will be looking towards. Congratulations on getting into the big league of jobs because you guys will be ballin' someday. But there is a long road ahead before everyone reaches their dream, so I'm going to share some advice. If you haven't started purchasing all the instrument kits and books for this year yet, then let me tell you that as a dental student, you will find that money runs away faster from you than you can find it. Fear not, for we have a temporary solution - AUDSS Trades. Don't forget to join the Facebook AUDSS Trades page and look for 2nd hand books and instruments. It will save you $$$!!!

Good luck and see you guys around!

Sponsorships

Hi First Years!

Well done on starting Dentistry, we hope the excitement of getting into the course hasn't worn off yet. O-Week is a lot of fun and a great opportunity to make some new friends (hopefully also in the older years) and to get a feel for the dental school.

Our Sponsorship team will be around to talk to you about some of the opportunities available this year with our very generous partners, along with the many social and academics events coming up kindly sponsored by them. Make sure you keep your ears out for the loyalty card and grab yourself a membership bag to get a lovely assortment of donated goodies!

We look forward to meeting you all over the coming weeks!

Marketing

Hey guys,
The marketing team is here to bring you merchandise in the form of membership bags, AUDSS hoodies (look out for these) and pub crawl tees. It is also our job to notify you of all of the amazing events we have on offer throughout the entire year (whether they be educative or intoxicative), so expect plenty of Facebook notifications from us and look out for colourful posters around the uni and hospital. We're all very approachable (the guy on the right is, anyway), so don't be afraid to come and say hi.

LAURA KENYON

Hey guys, Josh and Laura here from Student Affairs. Congratulations on making it into the course! Student Affairs is mainly concerned with your wellbeing whether it is emotional or educational. To assist with your education, we run classes (GILs) to supplement your lectures and if you ever feel like you want to know more about dentistry in the real world, then we also run an Academic and Professional Development Program (AAPDP) which consists of lectures run by practicing dentists on various topics. We also run a buddy system where we will pair you up with a few seniors so that if you have any questions you can always ask them (plus it means you'll always have at least one friend). Not gonna lie, dentistry is quite a difficult course which is why we will be here to try and make it easier for you. Have as much fun as you possibly can during the next 5 years .

Good luck to you all!

Love,

Student Affairs

Community Aid

Community Aid raised more than $6000 for Community Outreach Dental Program and the East Timor Dental Project. In 2017 we will need your help to do better!

Congrats on getting into Adelaide Oral Health/ Dentistry – you are a select few privileged enough to gain quality education and a great career path. Community Aid, however, is about helping the less fortunate and giving back, encouraging students and members to be involved in wider dental and community projects. Look out for exciting raffles, sporting and community events where you can make a difference in fundraising for dental projects and charities. Our major events this year will be Sleep Out for the Community Outreach Dental Program (providing dental health services for the homeless), Trivia for Timor (aids and improves dental services to East Timorese citizens) and ADA awareness week Oral Health for Busy Lives; so make sure you participate for a great cause!

If you have any great ideas to help further Community Aid or want to get involved, please get in touch with us!

A dental student pledge

I, as a member of the dental school, will keep this pledge and these stipulations:

- If I don't understand what a tutor has explained, I will keep saying "No, I don't understand" as opposed to simply nodding.
- I will only get a tutor to check my work once I have correctly critiqued it myself and fixed what I can.
- I will not call or text patients using my personal mobile device.
- I will not take objects from the SIM lab for practice without permission first – no matter how much is in supply or how dire my desire for home practice is.
- I will keep the collimator on whilst taking BWs.
- I will not hide damage to adjacent teeth from the tutor either through the use of unfilled resin or hidden under a matrix band.
- I shall faithfully observe the principles of ergonomics, honing my indirect vision.
- I will not leave ILA research questions to the day before nor will I rely on previous years' work/references.
- I will keep teeth screwed in tightly and natural teeth properly waxed in.
- I will not do any work outside the manikin mouth.
- I will not change the contrast on a radiograph to mask an obturation's quality.

I shall faithfully observe these principles and code of conduct set forth by myself. All this I pledge with pride in my commitment to avoiding a future as a shifty dentist.

NEW ADH UPDATE

FROM THE PRESIDENT & VICE PRESIDENT

The new ADH is being constructed as part of the Adelaide Health and Medical Sciences Building that is located in the West End, adjacent to the new RAH.

The ADH will occupy the top three floors with an iconic view of the CBD. This initiative is part of the new SADS health agreement with the UoA and SoD, and negotiated 48-week clinical programme with the new facility in the Riverland up and running. I'm finishing my placement there as we speak and as the first group there I'm confident in voicing that it is a fantastic facility with very supportive staff.

We have been told with the new ADH that there will be lockers allocated for dental students given the particular requirements we have with clinic.

There will be communal lunch rooms and tutorial rooms that are prioritised for student bookings as required.

At this stage, we have been informed that the "old" ADH will be winding down in May/June and the new ADH should be functioning full capacity by the end of July.

There should not be any disruptions to BDS1-3 or BOH, however there may be issues with clinic in the key transition period (potentially a couple weeks) that disrupts clinic for BDS5 students, and also any laboratory work that is processed through the ADH. Around this time, we will also be hosting the LAST BASEMENT PARTY ever; a tradition that has been marked in the AUDSS calendar for the last three or so decades.

Further details can be found via this link:

<https://www.adelaide.edu.au/west-end/about/dentalhospital/sahealth-dentalhospital-faq.pdf>

UoA and SADS aim to engage and provide dental health care with the wider community. As a result, BDS1 will begin to adapt to this, and will be in Gilles Plains for their clinical sessions this year – easily accessible by bus or car. The new ADH will comprise of facilities for younger year levels, predominantly BDS 2-4 as well as postgraduates.

At this stage, BOH will be placed community wide. In lieu of the move, we do lose our beloved Basement, however we are working with the Dean, SoD and FMHS in creating a new space for dental students; as for many of us, we are in many senses a family. At this stage, our team push is to find space near the Sim-Clinic, that we believe now is the central hub for the dental student community.

The new ADH provides a unique opportunity to those who have always been asking to explore beyond dentistry and embrace the interdisciplinary health management of patients, with a closer proximity to Nursing and Medical students. This year will mark the first in the creation of an Interfaculty event that should be early Semester 2 to celebrate the unity.

THE PEANUT BUTTER STORY

BY DHARISHINI VELLAYADEVAN

For the fresher's Paperpoint, I deeply contemplated on the theme I should dwell on. Should I be welcoming and motivating to jumpstart your toothy odyssey, or ruthlessly pop your unicorn bubble of social admiration for getting into dental school (congratulations by the way, it is no easy task), or list the X number of necessary skills and things you need to do in first year to get into second year (because that is all I know about the academic aspect dental school so far).

I pondered quite a bit, and finally decided on talking about peanut butter. Yes, peanut butter because I simply worship it (although the chunky ones get annoyingly stuck between your teeth). Perhaps, I will briefly chat about teamwork, because tip #1, dear first years: there is not any form of work in the first year sans teamwork.

That is all about teamwork you should know. Now, let us go back to peanut butter. Peanut butter is the most delectable, not to mention flexible spread/ingredient/topping/dip that has been introduced to the world after wheat and rice (yes, I know they are not processed, and perhaps don't quite match up to the order).

My point is that peanut butter is heaven, except when you're allergic to nuts, then life is hell for you no matter whether you eat it or not. (There you go, a little Buddhist philosophy for you)

My second point is I wish teamwork activities were as smooth as the heavenly peanut butter, or crunchy and fun to those who are on the opposite debate group. My third point is learn to self-process and turn yourself into some peanut butter, so that you are pleasurable to work with a wide range of people, even to those who naturally repel you, because they are allergic to you. It is immunology a.k.a nature, you see. You know what happens if you go against nature, those microscopic white blood cells will literally squeeze the windpipe and the life out of you. Deadly.

Now, I will guide you on how to make some peanut butter that works well with those who either love, detest or are neutral with it. By the way, I came across this technique from a random Google research (hint: not a reliable source, but go on reading anyways).

First, you will select some fine, gourmet peanuts. In order to do that, you'd have listen to the peanuts, thoroughly. Peanuts extraordinaire will tell you to only pick out the matured and polite ones, because once divinely roasted, they blend and react appropriately upon the intense pressure of the food processor blades. The nasty ones tend to crumble and bring the rest of their fine peanut mates to the journey of pain and suffering, and ultimately failure, because you can't make gourmet peanut butter with a single godly peanut, can you?

Once you get a nice, creamy paste, it is time for you to communicate. To prevent crushing the windpipe to those who are hypersensitive to you. Like I said, allergy is part of nature. Tell them that they may die if they consume it, because you know, they are forbidden to the celestial goodness of peanut butter. And if you are allergic to peanuts, tell others about it too, so that the people around you will find a way to make sure you are nice and safe. It is that simple. Then again, perhaps not.

But no worries, I am sure both of you can have a nice discussion with our neutral denominator, the peculiar Vegemite to find a common ground. As a group, you could come up with plenty of alternatives to work round with, helping each other out in such a way that both of you can coexist harmoniously and whip up some delicious peanut butter dishes.

Fine peanut butter works in wondrous ways with plenty of other food, sometimes providing nutritional benefits but mostly delighting the 8000 gustatory cells in your mouth.

The take away message here is, try to be an exquisite peanut butter, or at least something that would work well with it, like honey (unless you are vegan, then maybe try maple syrup?). Because the world would love you better for it and you would be doing some good for humanity (it is double bonanza for the animal kingdom if you are dealing with maple syrup). Hopefully, you are not going all nuts with this peanut butter talk, because if you are, you are in for a long, long ride.

Cheers.

Disclaimer: All comments, jokes, tips, peanut butter, maple syrup, garbage etc are of my own making and in no way represent the policy of the School of Dentistry, University of Adelaide, AUDSS or the other member of the University, nor any cat, dogs, possums, bacteria, atoms, etc on campus.

NEED A GUIDE TO ADELAIDE?

Go to <http://www.audss.org.au/freshers/>

Leave it to the AUDSS to come up with a comprehensive guide presented in a digestible manner. They basically did what used to be Publications job, and their advice is unbelievably legitimate (i.e. I can't detect any sarcastic suggestions).

In any case, as fantastic as those suggestions are, I can't help but come up with my own little personal guide. For you see, the things I look for in a restaurant are: quantity + cost + speed.

So let's start with places to eat – and by this, I mean places to order take away food from for the sole purpose of eating by yourself whilst at your computer.

I've watched as almost all of these places increased their menu prices from $0.50 to a dollar.

Darren's food guide.

"So what are we eating?"

"Dunno. Something Asian."

1. Soonta – James place

I used to be a regular here back when I lived literally across the road. I got friendly with one of the guys and he would give me a bit more. Noodle bowls were what I always got but from late 2016 – with the introduction of the rice bowls – I converted as this would at least satisfy me for lunch, but you have to work out the timing and realise which staff member gives more; it seems that they judge by what they would consider 'enough for lunch'. Amazing soy sauce. Good roast pork. Advice: ask for half and half (two meat options for same price).

2. Katsumoto - Adelaide Arcade

A small hidden restaurant that serves "Japanese food" (i.e. Chinese). Their toriteriyaki don is recommended.

3. Miss Mai - Gawler Place

Rice bowl - cons: they don't have Soonta's soy sauce. Their rice bowl takes 5-10 mins to make.

4. Warong - Rundle place

I only really go for their "mee goreng" and "nasi goreng". Go shopping at Coles while you wait.

5. Laksa house - 45 Flinders St

a. Pros: Good amount + good food.

b. Cons: Crappy opening hours; a bit of a walk.

6. Southern Cross Arcade near James Place

a. BB Steak House – Great steak from $11-13. Tip is to ask for extra gravy (no charge).

b. Koi's Kitchen – My first love when moving to Adelaide: $5 kaarage chicken rice bowl. I would buy multiples of these for lunch + dinner back when I was a fresher in college.

c. Ricky's Kitchen - The finest slices of roast meat in Adelaide. Watch as Ricky flawlessly delivers a dish that is master class in portion size; an impeccable balance achieved through the ratio of rice to meat - just enough to make you want more, but not too little to instigate a complaint. The amount of meat is bloody frustrating.

7. Subway – Anyone want to see my prized Subway serviette collection? I have one back when they did the old red tomato design. Used to have a trick to get extra meat without paying $3 extra but they patched it...

8. Knoodle - Pultney Street

Knoodle? K noodle? Or is the K silent? Flash your ID card for a discount, food coma and a stomach ache later on. I frequent this place if I want to eat by myself + have no time + want to be full.

9. Zen's kitchen - Renaissance arcade-

"Zen's?" – a phrase heard countless times. Good mayo chicken. Pho is disappointing.

10. David Jones food court– Pretend to be interested at the Asian takeaway place whilst "tasting" their samples..

11. Dumpling King – King William Street

The superior "Dumplings R Us".

12. KFC – $9.95 Tuesdays. Would last me at least 2 days.

13. Woolworths/Coles roast chicken – essentially my 'have an exam soon' diet. Coles is less dry but I prefer Woolworths' taste.

14. Hub food ('that Asian place') – Nothing more depressing than having to come here because of a 1hr break. Play it safe and get the braised beef with rice. Don't get the small size because... it is small.

One day a food blog will be started on this, but the time has yet to come.

Ten Little Lifters

Ten little lifters went out to dine;
One choked on his chicken breast and then there were Nine.

Nine little lifters sat up very late;
One cramped his ab muscles and then there were Eight.

Eight little lifters visiting another iron heaven;
One said he'd stay there and then there were Seven.

Seven little lifters blending up a mix;
One ran out of whey and then there were Six.

Six little lifters playing with a twenty five;
One jammed his finger and then there were Five.

Five little lifters squatting raw;
One broke his back and there were Four.

Four little lifters going out to take pre;
A tingle overwhelmed one and then there were Three.

Three little lifters walking to the loo,
One lacked fibre and then there were Two.

Two little lifters walking in the sun;
One went for a run and then there was One.

One little lifter left all alone;
He went and skipped the day of leg

And then there were None.

THE NIGHT BEFORE O-WEEK

BY TESSA JENSEN

Twas the night before O-Week, when all through the basement
Third, fourth & fifth years moaned their pleas for abatement
Exam revision was done with exceptional care,
In the hopes that bedtime soon would be there

BDS 2 were nestled all snug in their beds,
While visions of holidays still danced in their heads
Lekkas in her 'kerchief, the Dean in his cap,
Had finally settled the tutors all down for their naps

When out on Frome Road there arose such a clatter,
All sprang from their bed to see what was the matter.
Upstairs to the windows we flew like a flash,
Tripping over Security with a deafening crash

The moon on the breast of the Plane Tree leaves
Gave the lustre of hayfever to the quite absurd scene
When, what to our wondering eyes should appear
But baby dent students, cowering in fear

With a few straight from high school and a few mature-age,
We knew they sought to turn over a new page
More rapid than eagles, their eagerness would wane
So we whistled, and shouted, we said to them plain:

"Now, Fresher! Now, Newbie! Now, first year, my friend!
We'll tell you it straight, we're not going to pretend
To the very top floor! Up to level 6 you go!
Now dash up! You'll be late! Meet the stairs - your new foe!"

As dry leaves that before wild Adelaide weather fly
When they meet with an obstacle, mount to the sky
So up to hospital-top, the freshers, they flew
With stitches and wheezing, they just made it through

And then, our eyes twinkling, finding this rather a hoot
We gossiped about which ones we kinda found cute
As we drew in our heads, and were turning around,
Back down the stairs the freshers came with a bound

They were dressed in blue coats, professional clothes head to foot
We glanced at one another, shocked they weren't yet off-put
A bundle of self-assessment forms they had flung on their back
And they all looked excited to open an instrument pack

Their eyes – how they twinkled! Their dimples how merry!
Cheeks the colour of gingivitis, and noses the colour of cherry!
Their droll little mouths were drawn up like a bow

Clearly, they had no idea how far there was yet to go
The tutor watched over as they examined the teeth
And suddenly doubt it encircled their heads like a wreath
But they were still young and fought fire with fire
Their courage and perseverance we had to admire

They were friendly and smart, right jolly little elves
We laughed and welcomed them, in spite of ourselves
With winks of their eye and twists of their head,
We soon gave up encouraging mounds of fear and dread

They spoke not a word, but went straight to their work,
And filled all the workbooks, attempted rubber dam with perk
And laying a finger aside of their nose,
And giving a nod, through the first weeks they rose!

They sprang to the bus, thanked the AUDSS,
And headed down south on the Dent Camp Express
But we heard them exclaim, 'ere they drove out of sight,
"Happy O-Week to all, and to all a good-bite!"

DARREN'S SOLUTION

BY: MR NGUYEN

*Bạn tên gì?
- Publications exec.*

It's Tuesday, the 14th of February. It's Valentine's Day. It's 9pm.

Two young men sat there unspeaking, wearing faces of slight concern.

One would imagine that following the completion of the fixed prosthodontics written and practical assessment – the hurdle that marked the culmination of five weeks of training – these two would, at the very least, have less strained expressions upon their faces. The silence would have been deafening, was it not for the top Vietnamese-pop songs of 2016 that resounded in the air.

Half an hour ago, one of the men posed a deceptively simple question,

"How do I encourage and promote discussion and communication within my committee?"

This was important – a committee which lacks communication will inevitably fail to achieve the objectives that it has set out to achieve.

Ensuing that was a plethora of suggestions and ideas, all of which resulted in a shake of the head, or a phrase that was much too common within the Publications committee,

"No, that wouldn't work."

Time passed, and these men had still not moved from the positions that they had initially assumed nor spoken a single word. Was the situation too dire? Were there no solutions? Had they given up?

It was so sudden when it happened. The man uprighted in his chair. His once dull expression transformed into a look of conviction. His right hand moved swiftly as he manoeuvred his $1.50 'professional gaming mouse.'

After a few clicks, he sat back into his chair and breathed a sigh of relief; a look of content on his face.

'What had happened?' the other man thought.

'Was the answer right in front of us?'

In a scurried manner, he took out his mobile phone to check what had come to fruition. Slowly, he placed his phone on the table.

"Darren."

"Yeah?"

"This is one of the dumbest things that I've ever seen."

During my time as a young exec last year, no case was more exciting and mysterious as the case of the Missing Membership Payment.

In the year of our Lord 2016, a fresher attempted to join the AUDSS and paid the cheap membership fee. Unbeknownst to him, he fell victim to an unofficial website. What transpired next was all true, as I transcribed the investigation that took place - led by AUDSS's own detective Xam.

The Xam:

"Send me the details of the person who had the issues with the fake website."

"I need to follow up."

"Has anyone, I mean ANYONE, talked to a person about website hosting... from a group called Joinform?"

The committee:

"Nope."

"Not that I know of."

"That's the one that a fresher showed us."

The Xam:

Can you tell what's wrong with this picture?

The committee:

"Oh gosh..."

"Oh god...that's terrible."

"...imitation is the greatest form of flattery."

"Too bad they got our organisation name wrong."

I'm missing something - there's a piece to this puzzle that has yet to reveal itself to me.

The Xam:

"I just realised, you're going to think I'm slow now but he didn't get the name wrong. He just purposely misspelled it."

"Are we 100% sure that one of us did this?"

The committee:

"Perhaps we can contact the university club associations and let them know what happened... it's terrible he's been doing it for so long..."

"That's how he gets away with using our name without using our name. A professional swindler since 2002. Do we bring authorities into this matter?"

The Xam:

"I will handle it."

"The fact is - he already stepped on our toes. So we need to gather information, which I will do."

"I need to contact Amazon which is the domain hosting company."

"Let's take this guy down."

The Xam:

"I just need to make sure that no one did this in the past because it's either we legitimately have some guy scamming or some idiot signed on to this and never told anyone"

"I'm beginning to understand what happened."

"I have a theory - I'll confirm it within the week."

The very next day;

The Xam:

"My suspicions were confirmed"

The committee:

"No way... thanks for getting to the bottom of this... but..."

The Xam:

"Basically the committee of old tried to do something, it failed/no one really mentioned anything about it - it's come back to bite us, but now its resolved."
